Firemen Hold September Meeting

Members of the Prescott Fire Department held their regular monthly dinner meeting at the Lee Hotel Tuesday. All members and two honorary members were present. Lindell Buchanan gave the invocation.

A steak dinner and general fellowship was enjoyed by all.

Chief Easterling called the meeting to order and the minutes of the last meeting were read by Secretary Garret and approved. Two alarms were answered in the city with little damage. An alarm was answered at Broughton where two box cars were on fire. The firemen attended four night courses at Hope. The school of instruction is to familiarize the members in the latest methods in fire fighting.

A general discussion of fire protection for property outside of the city and in a five mile radius of the station. In order to get more information on this protection, it is suggested that you contact your local fire insurance agent. The meeting adjourned until October.

Elementary PTA Board Meeting Held Tuesday

Executive Board members of the Elementary Parent Teachers Association met Tuesday morning in the school cafeteria for the first meeting of the school year.

Mrs. Bob Reynolds, president, announced that the first regular meeting of the PTA would be held Thursday, Sept. 10 at 3:45. Mrs. Floyd Hubbard will be the principal speaker.

Plans were made for the annual membership drive to be held Oct. 5 through 9. Mrs. P. A. Escarre announced that on the evening of Sept. 29 there would be a county council meeting at Williesville.

The group discussed plans for the float to be entered by the association in the Nevada County Fair. Mrs. J. R. Bemis is chairman of the float committee. It was announced that the Elementary PTA would include grades one through eight. It previously included grades one through seven.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cummings have been the guests of relatives in Brinkley.

Mrs. D. L. McRae Jr. and Mrs. Tony Bemis motored to Little Rock Wednesday to the day.

State Parole Officer Lindell Buchanan attended a board meeting in Little Rock on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Tuelter have returned from Jonesboro where they were the guests of their daughter, Mrs. Jim Sloan and family.

Wyndell Deaton returned to his home in Sparkman on Wednesday after a visit with his sister, Mrs. Wallace Purdie and family. Nancy and Kathy Purdie accompanied him home for several days visit.

Bobby Irving of Corpus Christi, Texas has returned to his home after a visit with his grandmother and aunt, Mrs. Bob Hitt and Miss Berva Hitt.

Mrs. Charlie Scott and Miss Linda Scott spent part of last week in Little Rock as the guests of relatives.

Arkansas Has Recorded Four Traffic Deaths

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With an expected crush of home ward-bound motorists still ahead, Arkansas had recorded four traffic fatalities as the Labor Day holiday weekend entered its final day.

State Police — Out in force trying to hold down the grim toll — expected nine highway fatalities in the 78-hour period from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight tonight.

John Jolin, 48, of Wiville, Ark. was killed yesterday when his car stalled on railroad tracks at Wheatley near Brinkley, and a Rock Island passenger train smashed into it. Two passengers in the car, David Payne and Jim Kirkmire of Wheatley, leaped out to safety just before the crash, State Police said.

Willie Goodnight, 60-year-old Negro, was struck and killed by a truck at a Texarkana intersection Saturday night. Police said he was trying to cross the street when the accident occurred. Driver of the truck was identified as Johnny Gilbert, 20, of Fulton.

The other holiday period fatalities were a Little Rock man whose car hit a utility pole and a Fort Smith pedestrian who was struck by an auto.

Six other violent deaths occurred in Arkansas during the week that ended at midnight Sunday. Three of these were traffic fatalities. There were two drownings and one death in a plane crash.

Arkansas had one public library in 1850.

Racial Tension Brings Labor Day Mob Scene

BALTIMORE (AP) — An out break of racial tension turned into a mob scene at a nearby amusement park Sunday.

Three pickets protesting the exclusion of Negroes from privately operated Gwynn Oak Park were set upon by an angry crowd shouting "Get a rope knock them over the head! Back to Russia."

They were among 40 protesting members from the Committee on Racial Equality, a biracial group which has picketed the last five "All Nations Day" observances of the park.

Two, one of them a Negro, were jeered, struck and kicked at by mob leaders after they refused to leave the grounds and were being dragged toward the exit by Baltimore County police.

They and three others who left under police escort moments earlier, were charged with disorderly conduct.

As the two were being hauled out by officers, someone in the crowd pointed out four Kraft, 34-year-old Baltimorean who had directed the demonstration, and shouted "Let's get this guy."

The mob leaders pushed him to the ground and began pummeling him. Kraft's spectacles were knocked off and a sleeve was ripped from his shirt.

No injuries were reported to the other pickets who were attacked. James L. Lacy, 24, Washington Negro and Joseph C. Sheehan 26, Baltimore.

Four Virginia Schools Will Admit Negroes

RICHMOND Va. (AP) — Schools in four communities will admit 60 Negro students along with white pupils Tuesday as Virginia expands racial integration under federal court edicts.

For Charlottesville and Warren County the mixing of students in the public schools will be a new experience.

In Prince Edward County Thursday there will be still another test of the state's new "freedom of choice" school policy when a private organization opens facilities for virtually all the county's white children.

Norfolk and Alexandria will resume integrated operations. Both cities admitted Negroes for the first time last February after the collapse of the state's school closure and other anti-integration laws in the courts. Norfolk will admit 21 Negroes to seven white or predominantly white schools. Nine Negroes are to be admitted to three schools in Alexandria.

Arlington resumed integrated operations last Tuesday by enrolling 16 Negroes along with white students.

Parents of 2,000 children in Charlottesville and Warren County must decide whether to send their children to racially mixed public schools or segregated private schools.

The Charlottesville Educational Foundation will open classes for children who object to integration. Twelve Negroes will be admitted to two public schools.

The Warren County Educational Foundation will offer private segregated classes again but has set no opening date. Eighteen Negroes have enrolled in the public high school.

The Prince Edward School Foundation will conduct all-white private classes in lieu of public schools abandoned by the county government.

Geneva to Be Scene of Big 3 Arms Talks

PARIS (AP) — The Big Four have agreed to resume disarmament talks in a 10-nation conference in Geneva early next year, the French Foreign Ministry announced today.

Participants will be the United States, Great Britain, France Italy and Canada for the West. The U.S.S.R., Bulgaria, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Romania on the Communist side, the announcement said.

A communique, published simultaneously in Paris, London, Washington and Moscow said the group will work in close liaison with the United Nations which, the communique noted, is still responsible for "general measures on disarmament."

"The creation of the committee," the communique said, "does not diminish in any way nor does it encroach on the responsibilities of the United Nations in this field."

The communique recalled that before they left Geneva last August, the foreign ministers of the United States, the U.S.S.R., Great Britain and France discussed means to achieve more efficient progress on disarmament.

"An agreement has now been reached by the governments of France, the United Kingdom of the U.S.S.R. and the United States on the establishment of a committee for the examination of the disarmament questions," the communique said.

It added that the U.N. Assembly, the Security Council and the U.N. Disarmament Committee would be kept properly informed of progress and said the Big Four had asked U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld to convene the U.N. Disarmament Committee "if possible this month so that its members be fully informed of the nature and the aims of the committee."

The communique said that the Big Four powers see the new committee as "a useful instrument to explore through mutual consultations the ways which can lead to agreements and recommendations on the limitation and reduction of all types of armaments and armed forces under an efficient international control."

Never Able to Override Ike's Veto

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker Sam Rayburn is the shepherd of the House Democrats. But every time he has tried to override President Eisenhower's veto, he has failed.

Seven times this year—144 times since taking office in 1953—Eisenhower has used his veto to kill a measure passed by Congress. Never yet has Rayburn been able to round up enough votes to override him.

He tried twice this year and failed. This must be galling to the 77-year-old Texan who has the greatest Democratic streak since early New Deal days. It's the strays who ruin him.

Most of the strays on votes have been Southern Democrats. Passing a bill needs only a simple majority vote of House and Senate. But passing a bill into law requires a presidential veto requires approval of two-thirds of both houses.

In the Senate there are 100 Democrats—55 Democrats, 35 Republicans—and a full two-thirds would be 67. In the House there are now 438 members—234 Democrats, 133 Republicans—and a full two-thirds would be 291.

Thus, despite their huge numbers, the Democrats would lack a two-thirds vote on any veto—by a handful—even if the full membership of both parties was voting.

And they couldn't get the two-thirds unless the Democrats voted solidly together and a few Republicans joined them. But the full membership of the two parties almost never votes at any one time.

And Democrats almost never vote solidly. So, when less than the full membership is voting on overriding a veto, the outcome is right and leftish, particularly if some Democrats wander over to the Republican side.

For example, this year Congress passed a $1,210,000,000 flood control bill to pay for reclamation and other water projects all over the United States. This kind of something-for-the-folk-at-home bill is called a "pork barrel."

Eisenhower vetoed it Aug. 28. He thought there was too much pork. In Congress the cries of "pork" sounded like cries of pain. Rayburn led the march to override the veto. This vote came Wednesday.

The total vote was 412 of which two-thirds would have been 275. But the vote was 274 for overriding, one short of the needed 275 to 133 for upholding Eisenhower's veto.

Eleven Republicans teamed up with 263 Democrats against the President. But six Democrats joined 132 Republicans in backing him up. If one of the six Democrats had voted with his party, Eisenhower would have lost five of the six were Southern Democrats.

Earlier this year Eisenhower vetoed a bill which would have stripped Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson of authority to refuse loans by the Rural Electrification Administration.

Rayburn's House Democrats failed by four votes to override that one. Four Democrats strayed. On this REA bill the Senate did vote to override—41 to 29—with two more votes than were needed to make up the two-thirds (67) of the total 32 votes cast. Sen. Frank J. Lausche was the only Democrat against overriding.

The Senate tried but failed to override Eisenhower's veto last July of the $1,275,000,000 housing bill. Rayburn's protégé and fellow Texan, Sen. Lyndon Johnson, Senate majority leader, reportedly wasn't keen for trying on this result. The vote was one short of the needed two-thirds. Then the Democrats were on Eisenhower's side.

The other vetoes this year important to farmers, and two on wheat and tobacco bills, both minor bills. After counting heads, the Democrats in the House and Senate didn't even try to override.

DOROTHY DIX

Hopeful Woman Waits for Wandering Hubby

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Could you tell me why some women will hang onto an unfaithful male and profess to love him in spite of everything? I have a very dear friend, well educated, intelligent, attractive who has clung to her husband through numerous affairs. With each new love he asks for his freedom which she won't give. There are no children. They have been married ten years. Why does she act like this? She's making herself miserable and nervous to accomplish nothing.—Irene G.

Dear Irene: Only the good Lord knows why some women cling to a heel, disregarding every hint that their persistence is not appreciated. Maybe it's the natural perversity of females, maybe it's a possessiveness that refuses to admit the inability to hold onto something. Whatever it is, it's a mystery. In time, your friend's patience may be rewarded and her husband will give up wandering. She might speed the process by pretending some indifference. Certainly she'd improve her health, appearance, disposition and temperament by going away for awhile and at least making an attempt to rebuild her life alone. Now she can do it; later it won't be so easy.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Some time ago I was going with a married man I loved dearly. We don't date any more but I still love him. Recently I've been dating a very nice chap who is generous, considerate, faithful, entertaining and well liked by my parents. I like him too but there it stops. I feel I'm too young (22) to settle down and I can't get too enthusiastic about marriage. Jerry, the one I date now, says he can't get to first base with me because I'm still in love with the married man. He says he can't fight a memory. I guess I can't, either. If Jerry stays away for three or four days, though, I miss him.—Lis.

Dear Lis: You are making the mistake of your life if you let the ghost of an old love spoil your chances with Jerry. He seems to have the makings of an ideal husband. Let him go and you could be in for a very lonely time. You can forget the married man if you really want to and will make the necessary effort.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Is it illegal to veto a bill which would have stripped Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson of authority to refuse loans by the Rural Electrification Administration.

Rayburn's House Democrats failed by four votes to override that one. Four Democrats strayed. On this REA bill the Senate did vote to override—41 to 29—with two more votes than were needed to make up the two-thirds (67) of the total 32 votes cast. Sen. Frank J. ## Armed Man Attacks a Policeman

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — An armed man attacked a police officer at a crowded amusement park yesterday, took his gun and tried to shoot the officer and then eluded him with it when the weapon jammed.

Patrolman Clyde McManey, 29, had gone to the park in answer to a disturbance call. He was directed to Ben Blanton, 56, of Little Rock, a husky, grey-haired man.

Blanton suddenly grabbed the officer's pistol and pulled the trigger but it "snapped". Police Lt. Carl Jackson said. Then the man hit McManey on the head.

Stunned, McManey took out his blackjack and began hitting Blanton. Meanwhile several men jumped in to help the officer. Among them were State Trooper Robert Galtier of Pine Bluff and armed Valachovic, a reporter for the Arkansas Gazette.

Blanton was subdued, arrested and held on an open charge. McManey received medical treatment at a hospital and was released.

Blanton also had a .32 caliber revolver on him, police said.

Police records showed that Blanton was charged with first-degree murder in 1945 for the hatchet-slaying of his father. But the charge was dropped when Blanton was declared insane and committed to the State Hospital. Hospital records on him were not available.

Air Base School Lease to Be Talked

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Little Rock County (Rural) School Board will meet Tuesday with attorneys for Army Engineers to discuss a possible lease for a Little Rock Air Force Base school which the government wants to integrate.

The Board apparently does not want to integrate voluntarily. The school, which is for children of Air Base personnel, stands to lose some federal aid if it is kept segregated.

A possible solution — to be discussed Tuesday — would be to lease the school to the Air Force, which would operate it as an integrated institution. It is possible that this arrangement might not cost the system any of its federal money.

Classes in the rural schools are to start Tuesday.

Ten children of Negro airmen have registered to attend the school with more than 700 children of white airmen.

Benson to Leave on European Tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson announced today that he will leave Sept. 23 on a European tour including visits to the Soviet Union and Poland.

In travels extending until Oct. 3, Benson also will visit Yugoslavia, West Germany, Poland, Finland, Sweden and Norway.

Benson said the tour was part of a long range world agricultural trade and market development program planned earlier in the Eisenhower administration.

Knoxville, Tenn., was named after Gen. Henry Knox, Secretary of War in 1791.

A beauty pageant was not held at a fair in Hope until the late 1920's. When it did come into being, the first Watermelon Festival Queen was Sarah Louise Gentry, who is now Mrs. Charles Wade of Little Rock. Her brother, W. C. Gentry, still resides in Hope.

At the first Hempstead County Fair when a person spoke of the contest for the most beautiful babe he was referring to the kind of babe that brings a smile to the

On the subject of babies, Mrs. A. P. Wendling Sr., now of Shreveport, was born during the time the first fair was in Hope. She still has a sister living in Hope — Mrs. 150 Brown. Because of the fair in Hope, her parents proudly named her for that event. A good many people may remember Mrs. Wendling as Fair Hope Porterfield.

Indians Slam Chisox to Cut American Lead

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The statistics show it is virtually impossible for him to win the American League batting title. The standings show his team has about the same chance of overtaking Chicago for the pennant.

Yet Tito Francona hasn't given up trying to accomplish both. Thanks to Francona and three other Indians—Vic Power, Woodie Held and Jim Grant—the Indians are still breathing today although they are 4½ games behind the White Sox with only 20 games left to play. This earned him the title of "The Chief" and the Indians are still breathing today although they are 4½ games behind the White Sox with only 20 games left to play.

Blanked by Dick Donovan through eight innings, Cleveland rallied for two runs in the top of the ninth to snatch the game out of the fire. Power drove in both runs with a two-base hit but it was Francona, who ignited the winning thrust with a one-out single, his third of the game. After Rocky Colavito became the second out, Held kept the rally alive with a single, setting up Power's game-winning blow.

Detroit took undisputed possession of third place, nipping Kansas City 7-6. Baltimore dropped New York into fourth place, beating the Yankees 5-4 and Boston edged out Washington 2-1.

In the National League, St. Louis shut out San Francisco 1-0. Milwaukee beat Cincinnati 6-2. Philadelphia nipped Pittsburgh 2-1 and the Chicago Cubs doubled the Los Angeles Dodgers twice 3-0 and 5-3.

The Cleveland victory went to Grant, the first of his career over the White Sox. He had lost eight straight to the league leaders.

It was the second straight day that Francona had combed White Sox pitching for three hits. He now is hitting exactly .500 (21 for 42) against the Sox. His overall

Cites Cooperation of State Boards

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus says state boards and commission have given him "remarkable" cooperation.

Without such cooperation, Faubus said yesterday, he would have little power under Arkansas laws to do anything about decisions made by the agencies. But he said his office was not as strong as the chief executive's post in some states.

Faubus made the remarks on a televised program dealing with problems of state government. Appearing with him were former Gov. Ben Laney, Dr. Henry Alexander of the University of Arkansas, and Dr. Carey V. Stabler, president of Little Rock University.

Yet Francona is almost certain not to win the batting title. Under the rules, a man must come to bat a total of 447 times to be eligible. Including 23 walks, one hit batter and nine sacrifices, Tito has batted 368 times. Even if he were to bat five times in each of the 10 remaining games, he still would be nine appearances shy of the required figure.

Kuenn, who is hitting .353, scored Detroit's winning run in the ninth. He doubled and came well, snapping a 6-6 tie. The Tigers rattled 15 hits off three Kansas City pitchers including a two-run homer by Frank Bolling and a three-run blast by Al Kaline.

Gene Woodling drove in three runs against his former mates with a home run and bases-loaded single as the Orioles moved to within a game and a half of the Yankees and the first division. Tom Brewer hurled a five-hitter and socked a home run to win a pitching duel from Washington's Pete Pumoa.

Seems Nobody Really Wants National Flag

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The team that eventually will capture the National League pennant could be the choicest champion in the modern major league history.

That goes for the Giants Dodgers, Braves or Pirates. It doesn't look like any of these four contenders really want it. Just look how each fared in the last two weeks.

San Francisco has lost eight of 13 and still leads by three games. Los Angeles has lost eight of 13, too, and are in second place, a half game in front of the Braves.

Milwaukee has lost seven of 12 and are in third place two lengths ahead of the Pirates.

Pittsburgh has won six of 11 but has dropped four of its last five and trail the Giants by 5½ games.

All but the Braves lost Sunday. Milwaukee defeated Cincinnati 6-2 but St. Louis shut out San Francisco 1-0. Philadelphia shaded Pittsburgh 2-1 and Chicago swept a doubleheader from Los Angeles 5-0 and 5-3.

In the American League, Cleveland nipped Chicago 2-1. Baltimore defeated New York 5-4. Detroit beat Kansas City 7-6 and Boston edged out Washington 2-1.

The Giants' won-lost record is 76-60. Should they continue at their present pace, they will wind up with 66-100 for a .550 percentage. The lowest percentage for a champion is .576, posted by the two St. Louis clubs. The champion Cardinals of 1926 won 69 and lost 65, the same record achieved by the Browns when they won the American League flag in 1944.

Larry Jackson was the "Mantle-killer" Sunday. The right-hander spaced five singles as he chalked up his 13th victory. Young Mike McCormick was almost as good. Four hits and St. Louis' only run was unearned. It came in the eighth. Don Blasingame singled and raced to third when left-fielder Orlando Cepeda's return rolled into the Giant dugout. Alex Gramre recovered.

He claimed to have been bitten by a "big monkey," by which he meant a chimpanzee.

By WHIT MASTERSON

Chapter I
Modern man, if asked to name the greatest scourge this species has suffered, would probably put war at the top of his list. With characteristic ego, he considers himself his own worst enemy. Yet he would be wrong. The greatest man-killer of all time brandishes no weapons, issues no communiqués and observes no truce. It is so small that relatively few men have ever seen it. It is called bacillus pestis. More popularly, it is known as plague, the black death.

Plague's war on mankind is older than history and so exact statistics are not available. In the sixth century, bacillus pestis, raging through the Middle East, slaughtered an estimated 100 million people. Eight hundred years later it harvested the population of Europe: 25 million persons—one in every four—perished, and the wolves feasted on the unburied bodies. Less than 300 years ago, 70,000 died in London alone from its virulence.

At the turn of our century, it sailed forth from the Orient to claim another 10 million victims around the globe, but the vast majority of these were the helpless masses of backward lands. At best, this latest attack was only a rear-guard action compared to the full-scale conquests of before. The black death ceased to be the dread specter of the past. Today, with a well-stocked medical arsenal, modern man thinks of plague, if he thinks of it at all as belonging to a bygone era as remote as the Crusades.

And yet, almost unnoticed, the inexplicable reversal plague has again begun to creep outward from the remote uncivilized areas that have always been its stronghold. Its strength apparently undiminished. As yet, no serum or vaccine has been developed which can be termed wholly effective.

FROM HIVA-OA
My dear Cloris,
Here, somewhat delayed, is my usual Christmas letter and I hope that you have had a pleasant holiday season. My own has been rather hectic as you'll be able to judge by my new address. Yes, your peripatetic father has found himself a new roost.

I trust that the few things I mailed you from Fiji arrived in time and that they pleased you. Subconsciously, I keep picturing you as still a teen-ager instead of a grown-up woman of 26. I sometimes wonder if you're doing the right thing, burying yourself down there on the Mexican border. A veterinary's job doesn't seem very appropriate for a woman, particularly a young and pretty one.

You knew that my arrangement with the Ovara Maru was a rather loose one, my passage in exchange for my services as ship's doctor. My original destination was Panama—I have a number of friends there from Navy days—but when we reached the Marquesas, I rather liked the looks of the place and decided to stay over. Or maybe I was just tired of eating rice. Anyway, I'm now located on one of the two principal islands (there are 12 altogether), named Hiva-Oa.

From the length of this letter, you'll judge correctly that I'm not doing much work at present. As a matter of fact, I have only one patient. You might find his case interesting, in connection with your animal research. Not that he's an animal, of course. His name is George Erastos, and he's a Greek sailor off a Turkish tramp freighter that's been wintering here. Somehow he discovered I was a doctor and insisted that I treat his hand which was severely inflamed. He claimed it was the result of having been bitten by a "big monkey"—by which, I gather, he meant a chimpanzee. At first, I thought he was merely drunk. But it turned out that the chimp was aboard the freighter somebody's pet, suppose.

To make a long story short, I treated Erastos' hand as best I could and sent him on his way. This morning, however, he showed up again, complaining of severe headache, giddiness and pain in the epistomium, back and legs. Temperature 101 degrees. My first thought was rabies but the rapidity of onset and lack of thick mucus make me doubt this possibility. Anyhow, I've put Erastos to bed here and as soon as the government doctor returns from his swing around the other islands I'll get his opinion.

The freighter is carrying heavy machinery from Livorno, Italy, to some point in South America. Plus Erastos tells me some subsidiary cargo in the aft cabin, straw-packed crates, contents unknown. These belong to three passengers, an American and two Italians. Erastos was poking around the crates—out of curiosity, he says, but probably to see what he could steal—when the chimpanzee attacked him. I wrote him when you can. A letter addressed to Dr. Calvin Marquesas will reach me—or follow me wherever I've gone. Until then with all love.—Dad.

The letter was waiting in her mail box when she got home from work, together with the phone bill and a couple of advertisements. Cloris Howard gathered it up with the others, pausing only to glance at the foreign stamp and the postmark before she trudged wearily up the stairs to her apartment. Marquesas, she thought, that's a new one. I wonder what he's doing there. But it was a curiosity devoid of any surprise. She had long ago grown used to the idea of her father as a restless wanderer.

She read the letter, the case history of the Greek sailor, her professional interest captured, she frowned over the scanty facts. No, Dad was right; it couldn't be rabies. The onset of the illness was too abrupt. She wondered if her father could have misunderstood the sailor's broken English. Well, perhaps his next letter would shed some light on the business, though chances were that by the time her father wrote again he would have long since forgotten about it.

The doorbell startled her back to the present. She glanced quickly at her wristwatch but it was still a half-hour before the time she had specified. However, there was no doubt who it was. Answering, she murmured, "Does he have to be so blasted eager?" Raising her voice, she called "All right—just a minute." She put on her robe and went to let Gabe in.

It wasn't Gabe after all, but an elderly man carrying a clipboard and the yellow envelope of a Western Union message. "Miss Cloris Howard? Cablegram for you." He proffered the envelope and clipboard. "Bottom line. The office has been calling you since about noon but—"

"I'm sorry. I just got in a short while ago." Cloris closed the door and tore open the envelope.

She glanced automatically at the signature but it meant nothing to her. So she read the message and at first that didn't make sense, either—it must have been delivered to her by mistake. Then she went suddenly pale and her lips moved in a faint sound of protest. An "Oh, no!" that was on the double. She put that hand to the doorknob to steady herself. The metal was cold to her touch and she removed her hand quickly and stared around the little apartment.

The phone rang for a while before Gabe answered it, out of breath. "I was halfway out to the car," he explained. "Be at your place in 10 minutes."

"That's why I called." Her voice was even and controlled. "Don't come. Gabe. Not tonight. I can't go out with you tonight." "Really? What's happened?" "I can't talk now." Her voice broke slightly but she steadied it immediately. "I'll see you tomorrow. She hung up without saying goodbye and opened the cablegram again, with a faint hope that somehow she had misinterpreted its message.

INFORMATION HERE INDICATES YOU NEXT OF KIN DR. CALVIN HOWARD, RE GREG TO INFORM YOU DR. HOWARD DIED SUDDENLY SIXTH JANUARY, CAUSE OF MINED EFFECTS HELD PENDING INVESTIGATION. SINCERE CONDOLENCES ON YOUR GREAT LOSS. DUVAL COMMISSIONER.

She called up the cablegram and threw it across the room. A buzzing sound awakened her. For a moment, Cloris couldn't figure out where she was. The location of the bed was wrong and the coarse fabric pressed against her cheek didn't have the smooth feel of linen. She raised her head sharply. She was lying on the studio couch in the living room, rather than her bed, and her alarm clock had not from the telephone. Suddenly she understood. She had cried herself to sleep on the couch.

As the telephone continued to ring, she studied her wristwatch. Ten o'clock, a little over three hours since she dropped off. But was the apartment so bright the sun streaming in through the curtained blinds when... "Holy smoke!" Cloris exclaimed as reality struck. "It's morning! Where have I been, anyway?" Last night's shocking news, that father had died like a dunt 15 hours earlier, came back. She scrambled down the couch

President Ends Tour, to Fly Home Today

By EDDY GILMORE

President Eisenhower ended his 13-day swing through Europe today and flew back to Washington to prepare for his meeting eight days hence with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Because of bad weather in Iceland, the President canceled his plan to lunch there with Icelandic President Asgeirsson.

Instead, the chief executive's yellow-nosed jet airliner sped him to Washington via Garder, Newfoundland.

The President looked relaxed and sun-tanned after his three-day golfing vacation in Scotland.

He took the vacation to rest up after a series of conferences with European leaders—a tour which his doctors called one of the toughest jobs of his presidency.

After long and intimate talks with West Germany's Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and Britain's Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, he went to Paris to see President Charles de Gaulle.

Then he flew to Scotland to relax at his 16-room apartment in Culzean Castle.

On leaving Culzean, he shook hands with his host and hostess, the Marquis and Marchioness of Ailsa.

His final words to Lord Ailsa, who had lived in a wing of his ancestral home during Eisenhower's visit, were: "It's been just wonderful."

Eisenhower spent his last day in Scotland attending church, receiving a life membership in the Turnberry Golf Club, and rushing to get through one last round of 18 holes under threatening skies.

The President's decision to return to Washington was not motivated, Hagerty said, by any special political development.

The President has kept in close touch with developments in Laos through daily reports from Washington. But he had not received any new information since Saturday, Hagerty said.

Eisenhower demonstrated that he would rather play golf than eat. He skipped lunch and hurried to the Ailsa golf course after church. The sun, which had been bright and warm Friday and Saturday, disappeared behind heavy clouds, and the President apparently felt he might not be able to get in a last round if he waited too long.

Playing with U.S. Ambassador John Hay Whitney against New York corporation executives William E. Robinson and Alton Jones, the President again came in with an 83.

His total, the same as his score Saturday, was 12 above par for the course.

Bitterness Marks Labor Day Talks

By STANLEY MEISLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bitterness etched the Labor Day statements of union leaders today as they pictured labor defending itself against a powerful onslaught by big business.

On the other hand, President Eisenhower issued a statement stressing the giant gains made by American labor in the twentieth century.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, agreeing with the President's estimate of progress, added that labor should move forward and try to raise the low economic status of the migrant farm worker.

Two issues rankled labor leaders as they tried to marshal union strength on the nation's 55th Labor Day. One issue was the new labor control bill. The other was increased resistance by employers to union demands for higher wages, an issue emphasized by the steel strike.

"Today 'might as well be called anti-labor day,'" said James H. Carey, president of the International Union of Electrical Workers and a vice president of the AFL-CIO.

But the AFL-CIO officially named the day "Support the Steel Workers Day" in a move to help the 50,000 steel workers who have been on strike for eight weeks.

George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, said labor would have to fight big business with a new program of education and political power.

"Big business leaders are doing everything in their power to weaken and destroy our trade union movement," Meany said in a statement.

Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers and the AFL-CIO vice president, said "We are in trouble in America."

This has happened, he continued, "because giant corporations exercising monopoly control over vital sectors of the American economy."

He seized the telephone. "Hello?"

"Cloris? This is Mannheim." More properly, Dr. Thomas Mannheim, her superior at A.I. & Q.B. "What's happened to you?"

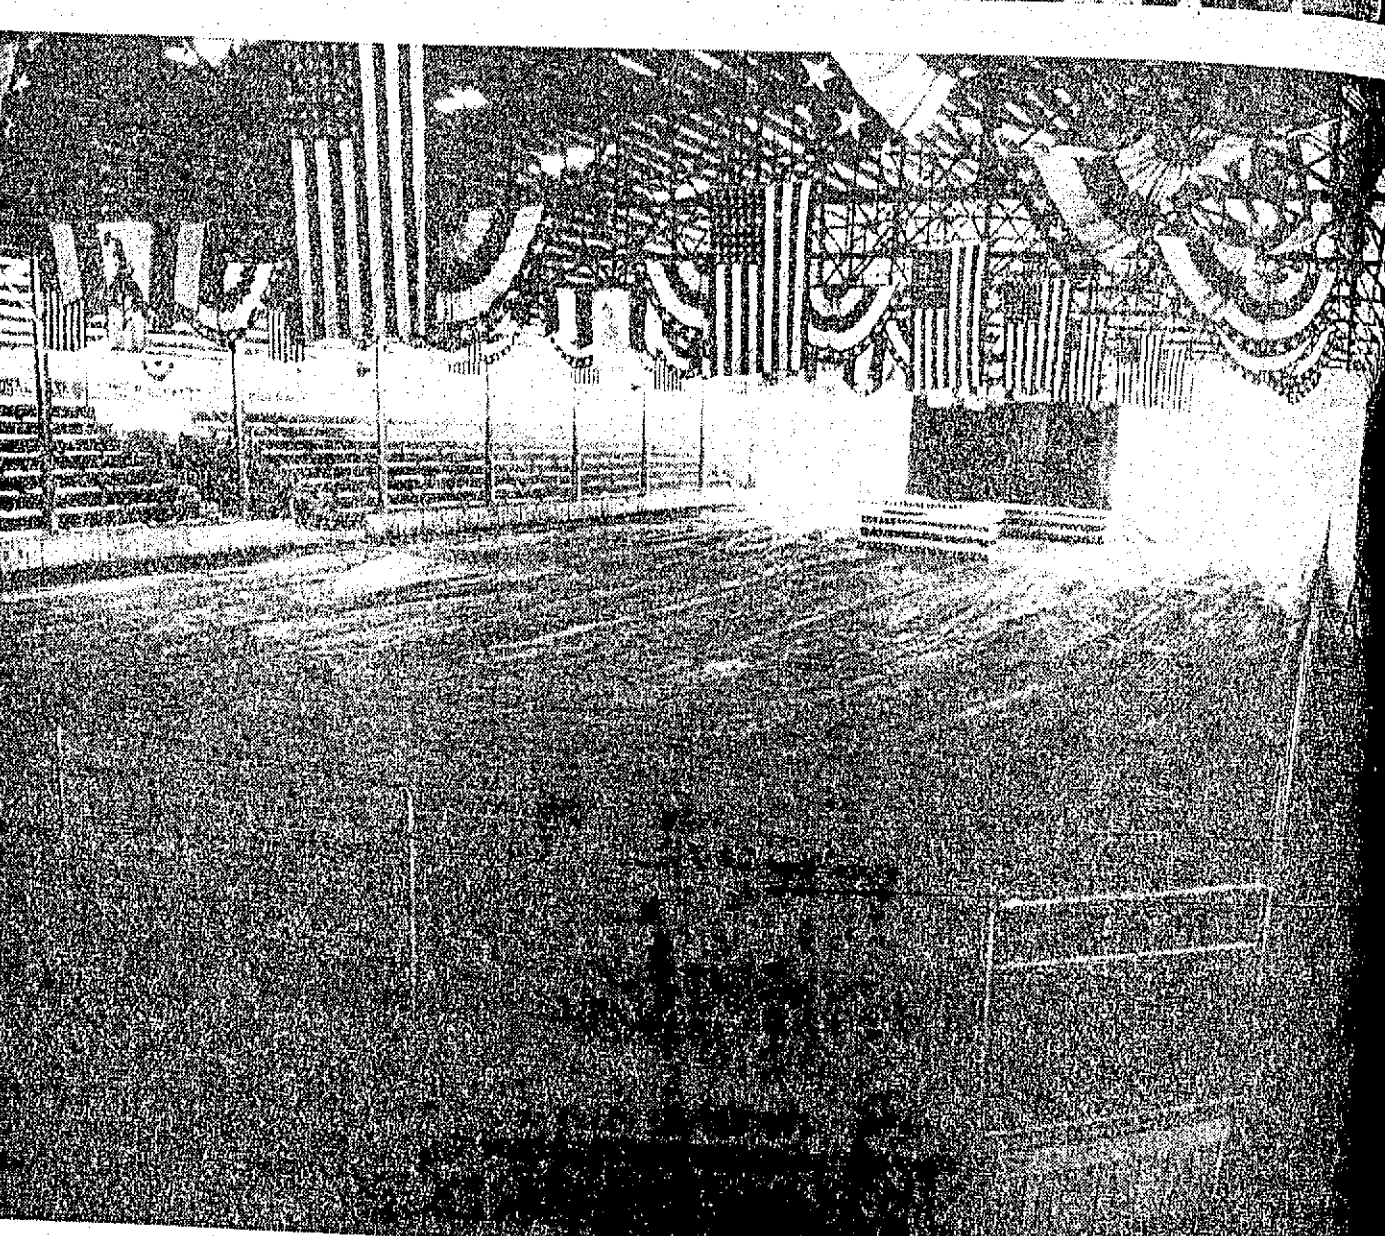

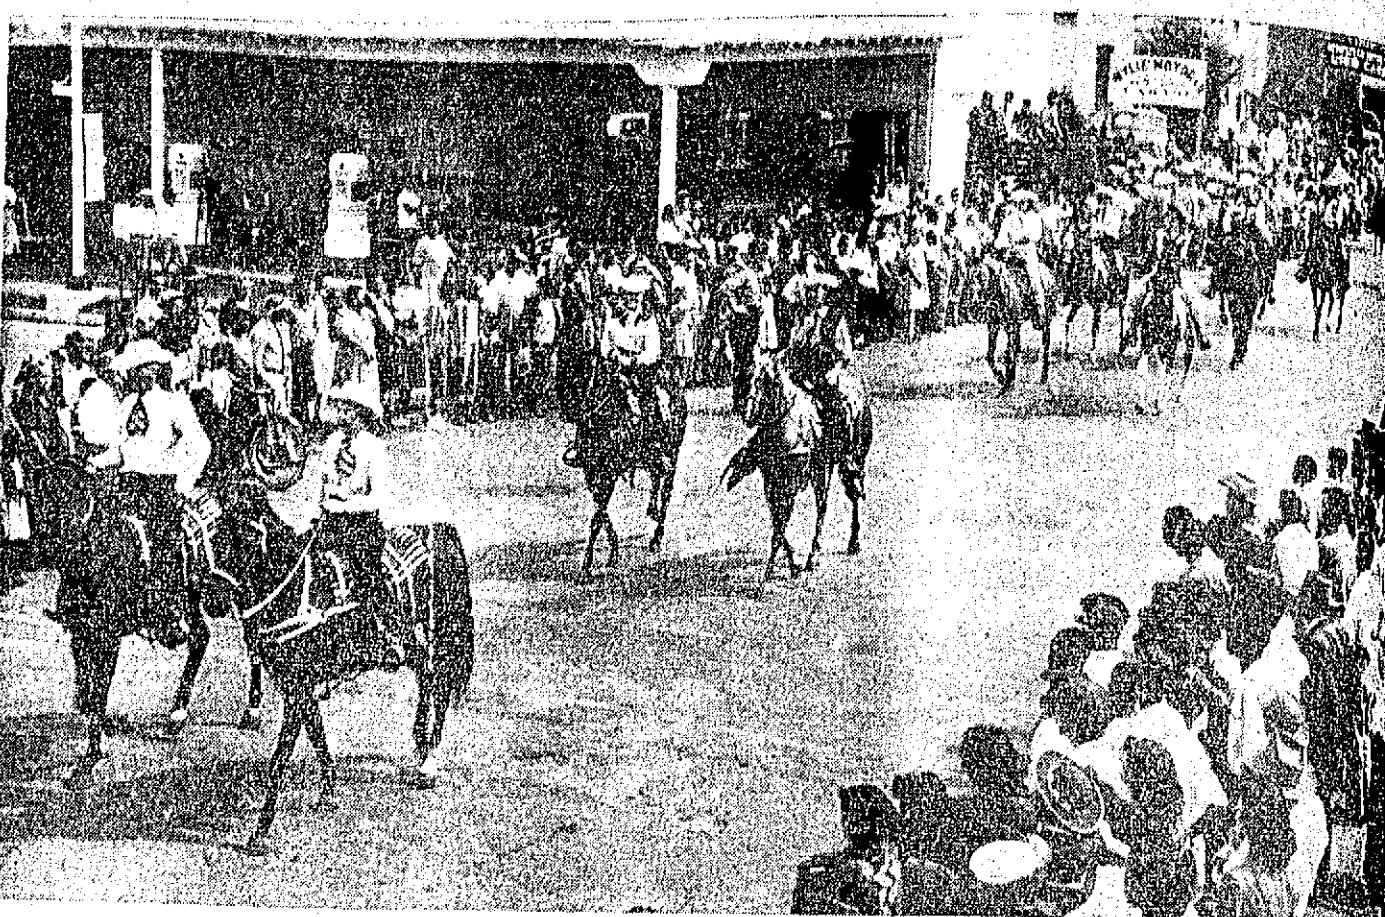

"I'm sorry, doctor. I guess I overdid it."

"Well, I was a little worried. You didn't show up this morning and then I just ran into Gabe. Wise of coffee and he thought something might be wrong."

Cloris looked across the room at the crumpled yellow ball of paper in the corner. "It's just that last night I got word that my father had died."

Johnson May Have Slowed Morse's Plan

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas maneuvered today for holiday action on Senate legislation despite the threat of time-consuming talk by Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.).

Both the Senate and the House scheduled Labor Day working sessions for the first time since 1942, in the first year of World War II.

Johnson's trump card in his battle against Morse's holiday delay tactic was a unanimous consent agreement to limit debate on a bill to extend the farm surplus disposal program.

Although Morse could force some delays, the farm surplus measure was officially before the Senate. This appeared likely to block the Oregon senator's anti-can economy are motivated by selfish policies which deny workers, farmers and consumers their fair share of the increased productivity made possible by our developing technology."

Eisenhower's statement, released by the White House in his absence, said "One cannot back out of a compelling awareness of the broad and constant improvement in the real wages of our people, and in the benefits they receive, and in the benefits they enjoy."

"American labor has advanced continuously to new heights of accomplishment," Eisenhower continued.

Two drafts exchanged for 3:30 A.M. EST

Secretary Mitchell arranged to speak at a ceremony by the grave of Labor leader P. L. McGowan, the founder of Labor Day.

"Since that first Labor Day in 1894," Mitchell said in his prepared speech, "our production has multiplied and our living standards have risen. Our people have more goods and services than ever before."

He said that the nation's progress has been made possible by the hard work of our people, and that the nation's future is bright as far as health, safety and comfort are concerned.
